Case Reports and Case Series in Cardiology Journal is a peer reviewed open access clinical cardiology journal established Internationally which provides a platform to publish case reports, case series, research articles, clinical trials paper, case study, original article, cardiac images and videos on all aspects of cardiology and cardiovascular medicine. The goal of the Case Reports and Case Series in Cardiology Journal is to publish first-hand accounts of causes related to heart surgery, the cardiovascular system, and coronary artery disease. Case Reports and Case Series in Cardiology Journal covers conditions pertaining to the heart and blood arteries as well as its diagnosis, therapy, and surgery. Heart case reports and heart case series are accepted for publication in the journal covering all topics related to cardiovascular surgery and medicine. Cardio geriatric and paediatric case studies are accepted.

Case Reports and Case Series in Cardiology Journal accepts original research and review articles from all around the world and uses an editorial tracking system to ensure quality throughout the review process. The Journal editorial board members or outside specialists handle the review process; any citable submission must receive approval from at least two separate reviewers before it can be accepted by the editor. Authors can use the system to track their manuscript submissions and, ideally, follow them all the way to publication. Manuscripts are available for download, and reviewers can send their comments to the editor. The entire submission, review, peer review, revision, and publication process can be handled by editors.
